

Environmental Health

ABOUT THE COVER

The legalization of cannabis for medical and recreational use in the U.S. has expanded over the past few years, with more states looking to implement legalization on some level. Politics and personal opinions aside, the legalization of cannabis poses several environmental health issues, such as the food safety of cannabis-infused edible products. This month's cover feature, "Medical Marijuana Edible Voluntary Recall in Arizona," provides an example of how one health department is striving to regulate this growing industry to ensure the safety of consumers. This month's issue also includes a highlight of NEHA's activities to address the growing educational and training needs of environmental health professionals related to food safety and cannabis-infused products (see page 52).
